

To create a new network or increase an existing one the best investment is to put your trust in a company that carries out the work in your interests. Korutoa is capable of analysing the cost and efficiency of the client's telecommunications network, to identify its possible inefficiencies into and to redesign it using the best technology on the market. This is undertaken in a way that allows the newly developed telecommunications structure to be dramatically reduced in cost compared with other structures of a operative efficiency level. Thus allowing your company to access the best price for the highest quality. Basing itself a detailed analysis of the client-company needs, Korutoa sets itself the goal of following the whole process from the projection to the starting up of the business networks.
